

March 7 article about the car-buying seminar and a comment allegedly made by Steve Pescatore. He advised against buying Kias and Hyundais because Korea is an unstable country.

Maybe he was thinking of the "axis of evil" or something, as in North Korea, but South Korea has been a successful and stable country since the end of the Korean War half a century ago.

There are no signs that South Korea is an unstable country. South Korea hosted the Olympics in Seoul in 1988 and will host the World Cup Soccer Tournament this year.

As a final note, I would suggest that students buy their cars at auctions and bypass uneducated and unscrupulous car salesmen altogether.

South Korea a stable country with stable business

I am writing in response to the

■ Kyung Hee Kim is a graduate student in the Department of Reading/Language Arts Education in the College of Education.